Communities at Work appoints new Chief Executive Officer

Communities at Work is pleased to announce the appointment of Ms Lesley Jordan as its new Chief Executive Officer, following an extensive selection process. Ms Jordan commences her role today, bringing a wealth of leadership experience across government and for-purpose sectors.

Ms Jordan's career spans health, community, aged care and human services. Since 2013, she has excelled as an interim executive, providing strategic leadership in governance, organisational transformation, operational management, quality assurance, and risk management.

Most recently, Ms Jordan served as Director of the Quality Care Pharmacy Program. Her previous interim CEO appointments include HeartKids Limited, Newcastle Anglican, Community First Step, and Twilight Aged Care. She holds a Master's in Health Management, a Graduate Certificate in Women's Health Nursing, a Certificate in Midwifery, a Diploma in Applied Science, and is a Graduate of the Australian Institute of Company Directors.

Communities at Work Board Chair Alan Greenslade said Ms Jordan's appointment marks an exciting new chapter for the organisation, building on its role as Canberra's largest community organisation and increasing its impact for local children, families, and individuals.

"Lesley brings deep expertise and a strong commitment to meaningful leadership during this period of sector transformation and organisational growth. Her track record in guiding organisations through change, fostering sustainable practices, and building innovative partnerships makes her an outstanding choice to lead Communities at Work into the future," Alan Greenslade said.
